TEST 1

The first factor ____ (1) ____ to compulsive use of a product is accessibility. Before the existence of the Internet, people ____ (2) ____ to a casino if they wanted to gamble. To conduct banking transactions, they had no alternative but to go to the bank. Shopping involved spending hours ____ (3) ____ various stores. Now, those with access to the Internet have immediate, 24-hour access to virtual gaming sites, online banking services, and online stores. Since there is ____ (4a) ____ waiting in long lines ____ (4b) ____ fighting crowds in the virtual world, people feel less attracted to the real world and indulge more heavily in the Internet.

Control is the second factor. This refers to the personal control ____ (5) ____ by individuals over their online activities. Online stock trading serves as a good example of the effect ____ (6) ____ control has on compulsive behavior. In the past, people ____ (7) ____ stock brokers for advice on investments, for making purchases, and for monitoring their accounts. In fact, they had no alternative. Today, however, things are different. ____ (8) ____ they find themselves competent to do so, people take control over their own investing. Such full personal control leads some people ____ (9) ____ an obsession with monitoring and adjusting their investments.

The third factor is excitement, which represents the emotional “rush” that is associated with winning. Studies show that an activity becomes addictive ____ (10) ____ winning is the motivating factor. In gambling, for example, the rush of winning becomes a great inducement for continuing to play. With any compulsive activity, the excitement of the activity becomes a powerful hook that encourages future behavior.
